Spotted Lanternfly spotted in Cuyahoga County

Normally we wouldn't tell you to squish bugs but this time, we are encouraging you to do just that. The Spotted Lanternfly is an invasive planthopper that poses a serious threat to our region's fruit plants and trees. It can weaken other plants and make them vulnerable to insects, pests and diseases. They also produce 'honeydew' and a type of fungus called "sooty mold" grows on honeydew which forms a black/gray layer of mold on the surface of the plant. That layer blocks the sunlight and starves the plant.

While Spotted Lanternfly will hang out on almost anything, the invasive Tree of Heaven (Ailanthus altissima) is a host plant for them. Removing these trees can greatly reduce the number of these pests.

We need you to learn how to identify these invasive pests and scrape off the egg masses and/or squish the bugs. They can and should be eradicated at any point of their life cycle. For more information, check out our blog at: <https://tinyurl.com/2p9d2p99>.
